

RHIANNON'S STORY

Rhiannon is a mother of two wonderful boys, an active volunteer, an artist, and a graduate of the Colorado School of Mines Engineering Physics program. She began her journey with JPP in 2015. She had just moved back to Colorado to be closer to family and enrolled her youngest son into Head Start in Wheat Ridge.

"Head Start felt like a community and JPP was an extension of that community."

Rhiannon's first goal was to complete her associate's degree, but she felt very overwhelmed with the idea of navigating the school system. JPP coaches were there for Rhiannon every step of the process, from completing paperwork, re-testing, FASFA, and filing taxes to enrolling in courses and paying for tuition, rent, and books.

"When I enrolled at Red Rocks, I was fortunate to have supportive teachers who encouraged me to continue my education and complete a four-year degree in science and physics. JPP and Red Rocks worked together with School of Mines to earn a transfer scholarship to make that possible."

Rhiannon's persistence and determination, along with the support of family, friends and local organizations has helped her to design and achieve lofty goals while caring for her children and giving back to the community. Rhiannon is passionate about encouraging others to push through obstacles, surpass their limitations, and become all that they are made to be.

In 2023, Rhiannon graduated from the School of Mines with her master's degree in Applied Optical Physics and accepted a position at Lockheed Martin. Her goal is to work locally in the optics industry while continuing to volunteer at her church and stay involved in both of her boy's academic and extracurricular pursuits.

One day Rhiannon would like to teach high school math and science, where she hopes to find opportunities to mentor kids who need a little help believing in their potential.

LEAH'S STORY

I have been a member of JPP for a little under six years now. I was skeptical when I first joined JPP, as that is just my nature to move into anything new. Rikki, my coach, changed my mind pretty quickly in that first meeting when she asked me to describe to her my ideal life.

I was so surprised to be asked that kind of question! I felt like I was being seen as a real human being and not just a case number. I told them I planned to just get my certification in medical billing and coding because I knew that it had remote options and wanted to have a flexible work schedule as a single parent of two young boys. She asked about my prior education, and I mentioned that I had been pursuing a degree in interior design prior to having kids. She encouraged me to, "just see how much you lack to get your degree." I only lacked about 12 credits.

With Rikki by my side, I went to meet with financial aid and see what it would cost to finish my schooling. She also talked me back into it after discovering the cost and helped me work out a plan to pay as I went.

JPP even got me connected with grants to help pay for my schooling and I graduated with my bachelor's and no added debt (aside from what I already had from attending before when I was more naive and didn't have such amazing guidance).

I am now working in the field I love at a job I adore with people who feel more like a family than coworkers. It's amazing! I am now, with Rikki's support and encouragement, working on savings to buy a home. I think the thing I love most about JPP is that they treat me like a person, like Leah. They didn't just throw resources my way and wish me luck. They asked me, "what do YOU want? How are YOU going to accomplish that? And what can WE do to support you? And once that goal is completed, there is much celebration followed by a "what's next?"

It's like having a group of friends that are constantly pushing you to move out of your comfort zone and into your true potential.
